Subject: Application for Investment Analyst Internship 2026–2027 (London)

Dear Orbis Investment Analyst Recruiting Committee,

I am writing to apply for the Investment Analyst Internship 2026–2027 in London. As a penultimate-year BSc student in Psychology and Language Sciences at University College London (UCL) on track for First-Class Honours, I offer an unconventional yet organically aligned foundation: combining formal training in human cognitive biases and experimental statistics with hands-on expertise in building empirical data pipelines and leading operational teams under high pressure.

Orbis's defining principle—that outsized long-term returns are achieved by taking independent, contrarian positions against market consensus—is fundamentally rooted in behavioral psychology. Markets misprice assets precisely when short-term herd dynamics, recency bias, and institutional conformity distort fundamental value. My coursework in cognitive science and behavioral heuristics provides me with a structured lens to deconstruct consensus narratives, identify reflexive overreactions, and evaluate where market perceptions deviate from underlying commercial reality.

In my research assistantship at the University of Oklahoma, I demonstrated the relentless verification and intellectual independence essential to fundamental equity research. Tasked with standardizing empirical findings across decades of management studies, I engineered an automated multi-agent screening pipeline across 700+ papers, achieving an inter-rater concordance of $\kappa = 0.98$ through painstaking error auditing without allowing the model access to human answers. This experience reinforced my instinct to verify primary source evidence from the ground up rather than accepting surface-level assumptions.

Furthermore, my military service as a Sergeant and Squad Leader in the Republic of Korea Army forged the emotional discipline and resilience required to withstand consensus peer pressure. Leading 25+ soldiers in high-stakes operational environments, I was accountable for daily operations and logistics across 5 units with zero room for error. Contrarian investing requires not merely identifying market mispricings, but having the intellectual honesty and psychological fortitude to hold convictions when consensus moves against you.

Orbis's meritocratic, degree-blind culture and long-term investment horizon represent the standard of fundamental investing. I am eager to apply my analytical rigor, behavioral insight, and independent mindset to your investment team starting Summer 2027.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,
Kyubin Yun
